

LIGHT, light and shade.

Our world system consists of departments of departments. This world system is divided into upper and lower worlds. For example, terms like underworld and over-world are common in fairy tales, in religions and in Greek mythology. Then, more and more people, who were subjected successfully to Resuscitation attempts, learn that there are otherworldly areas, although they were already considered clinically dead. Quite a few people who have had near-death experiences can tell of a world beyond.

At the top of our world system is the formless un-compacted vibrational level, which is the BASIS. THIS BASIS, WHICH we define HEAVEN, can exist for ITSELF. From this BASIS all further parts emanated by energy compaction. This means that these parts emanated as departments of departments which are nested in each other according to the model of compaction and the model of the complex hyperspace. This part of our world system, which is below the BASIS, we can define as "the universe". The universe itself can be divided into three parts (according to the book 'A Course in Miracles, Greuthof Verlag'). The first part is the light side of the universe. The second part is the medium-field and the third part the dark side of the universe.

BASIS/HEAVEN	pure LIGHT-world	Realm of wakefulness
Light-side of the universe	Light-world	Realm of peaceful dream
Intermediate level of the universe (= means of separation of light and shadow)
Dark side of the universe	polar world	Realm of nightmare

The terms "light" and "shadow" are fully in line with the brane model of physics. So Stephen W. Hawking writes in his book 'universe in a nutshell': "... So maybe we think we live in a four-dimensional world because we are shadows cast on the brane by what is happening in the interior of the bubble. ...". Because shadow doesn't exist without light, it must be the light somewhere. This gives us a light-shadow game (see Plato's Cave Allegory).

The BASIS ITSELF is nonpolar. IT is the LIGHT THAT is without shadow. Because there is no separation in the BASIS, there is nothing that separates light and shadow. So there is nothing that is casting a shadow. Therefore, there is no shade in the BASIS. There is only the LIGHT. And every part of the BASIS is LIGHT. Because everything is LIGHT, no part will be harmed or reduced by others. On the contrary, when LIGHTS come together, they are intensified. So, all the parts of the BASIS yield a strengthened LIGHT unit, because they are all LIGHTS. That, which is apparent from the LIGHT to become itself LIGHT, also takes part on the whole LIGHT unit in a way that IT is contributing to the growth of this LIGHT Unit. Thus we have ultimately mutual profit without loss. And because no LIGHT can take away LIGHT from another LIGHT, there is no separation of the individual parts of the BASIS. In this respect the BASIS is nonpolar in ITSELF.

The universe is energetically subordinate to the BASIS and represents a special but not really a separated unity. The BASIS and the universe are therefore like two poles. Here, however, we cannot speak of a reciprocal conditioning because the BASIS in ITSELF is complete and utterly self-sufficient for ITSELF. Thus, the BASIS can exist without the universe, but not the universe without the BASIS.

Can now the universe be nonpolar as a pole? Probably not. Finally, it must have two properties, as it has evolved as an energetic but not identical sub-state from the BASIS. On the one hand, it must be something like a reflection (mirrored entity) of the BASIS. On the other hand, it must be something like an antithesis (opposite pole) to the BASIS. The first reflection of LIGHT is light. And this has an opposite pole, the shade. Light and shadow cannot be truly equal, because the shadow gives way to the light, especially when the light is not limited by time and space (unlimited range).

But it is possible to subordinate the shadow to the light energy and to bring about a separation between them by means of a separating agent. The soul-subtle and mental area of the universe is offering as separating agent. This separating agent separates the light side of the universe from its dark side. So, on the top of the universe are the light side, and below the dark side. The light side of the universe carries energetically the dark side.

Note: Formless un-compacted energy, which is pure vibration, is defined as the true light (= LIGHT). The first reflection of LIGHT is already a compacted energy state that is quasi still formless and is still pure vibration. This reflection is defined as light. The second reflection of the LIGHT is a higher compacted form of energy, which has polar properties. Because of its dual properties the energy is no more pure vibration. It is un-pure vibration, which we define as shadow.

Because the dark side originates from the light, it has to leave traces of light - so reflections, which symbolize the light. This is e.g. the sunlight. The sunlight is therefore no real light because it is no pure oscillation. With its dual property, it is both wave and particle. In this respect, it is according to the above definition, an element of the shadow, but it symbolize the light of the spirit. Here we have an accordance to the astrology, where the sun is a symbol of the spirit. In contrast to the sunlight, the light of the spirit is pure vibration, which is non-dual.

On the dark side of the universe the symbolized light faces the symbolized shadow. Therefore, the wrong impression prevails that HEAVEN (LIGHT) and hell (shadow) could coexist side by side. For the symbols it is true, but not for that, which is represented by the corresponding symbols.

The dark side can only be present, because the light side do exist. Without the light side, the dark side can't exist. But the light side can be without the shadow side. However, the light side makes on its own, without the shadow side, no more sense than the BASIS ITSELF. Finally, it is already in line with the BASIS, which is the world of light per se (= LIGHT-world). So why do the light side of the universe exist apart from the BASIS, if it were no dark side there? The light side is there to permit on the one hand the illusory shadow-light game (separation game) on the dark side of the universe. On the other hand it permits to raise the shade to light (spiritualization of matter) when the spirit of the dark side wants to go back to the LIGHT.

Thus, the division of the Universe into the above 3 realms is logically justified.

The spirit that perceives the light side, is the peaceful dreamer. His light is so bright that he can outshine all the shadows and therefore perceive no shadow puppets. In the eclipse constellation, this corresponds to the case that Earth and Moon are transparent - i.e. translucent. Because there is nothing here that is casting a shadow, no shadow is perceived. Since the peaceful dreamer sees no shadow figures, he cannot see himself influenced by them. He always looks at himself at every moment, because he is fully in his own light. Therefore, his dream is peaceful through and through.

The peaceful dreamer is aware of his origin and knows the way there. Because he knows that the dream can only be terminated together, he offers his help and guidance to the nightmare dreaming spirit. If all nightmare dreaming spirits have finished once their nightmare, the common translation to the BASIS, which is the world of our all waking, can take place. In this respect, the High Self of all earthly beings and all beings of light in the sum constitute that pole which draws us to HEAVEN, whereby the last step (translation into HEAVEN) can only be carried out by GOD HIMSELF. We only need to let us carry to the higher realms.

In the final consequence, poles have the function of building up a complex pole force field, which ensures that the corresponding energies can flow back and forth between the pole elements. In this way a dynamic can take place at all. In addition, they are changeable, which means that they can be resolved again. The Poles keep the universal dreamer in dynamics until all dreamers without exception want no longer the dream. At the end, the poles go into states that are non-polar and that are fully balanced states of harmony. And this is only possible, if light and shadow pass over into the LIGHT. So, in the end of the universal dream change and transformation find an end.

Light and shadow have evolved from the LIGHT to pass back into the LIGHT after the end of the universal dream.

Analogously it is to postulate, that Yin and Yang have evolved from the TAO to pass back into the TAO, which ultimately means the same. See: <http://franzguenter-leicht.info/data/documents/Tao-and-Yin-Yang.pdf>.

The confrontation with the poles keeps us in Dynamics and keeps us as long restless until we have gathered us in to haven which is non-polar in itself. Without a variability we could not find this peace pole. It also applies when everything changes, we can find this peace pole. Thus, the BASIS is our common starting point and at the same time the ultimate goal of all of us. Psychologically, this means that the dream has sprung from the waking state and that it will be finished, after it has been fully lived through. What then remains after this dream is to be pure waking consciousness.
